Felicia Hoshino is an award-winning illustrator. Her latest work A Place Where Sunflowers Grow, shows how a Japanese girl copes in a WWII internment camp. In addition to her artwork, Felicia also studies and performs Japanese classical dance. She currently lives in her native San Francisco with her husband and son. You can visit her website at www.felishino.com. Ms. Hoshino will read her book and answer questions about how she became an illustrator.

Copies of these titles will be available for purchase at the readings courtesy of Asian American Curriculum Project (AACP) in San Mateo. These titles are currently on order for the library and will be available soon.
